

Yama (VIII)—a Vasu; a son of Dharma and Sudevī.
M. 171. 47.

Yama (IX)—the agent of a class of devas.
Vā. 10. 72.

Yama (x)—the son of Sureṇu and Vivasvan; ill-treated by stepmother Chāyā, was about to kick her when she cursed him that he would lose his leg; he became Dharmarāja, lord of Pitṛs and Protector of the world.

Vā. 84. 22, 56-61.

Yama (XI)—a mukhya gaṇa.
Vā. 100. 18.

Yamas—prescriptions.
Vā. 104. 14.

Yamakas—an eastern tribe.
M. 114. 44.

Yamakinkaras—servants of Yama.
Vā. 110. 45.

Yamajihva—a Bhairava god.
Br. IV. 20. 82.

Yamadaṇḍa—an adhikāra.
M. 225. 16; Vā. 108. 4.

Yamadūtas—met Viṣṇu dūtas at the death of Ajāmila, and argued that punishment depended on the character of one's action, and that Ajāmila a Brahmana deserved punishment for having forsaken his svadharma and led an evil life with a dāsi. Overpowered by Hari's dūtas, they reported